International workshop on Slavic and East European Studies:
New horizon of dialogues on relational and area studies between junior and senior scholars

Date: 11-14 September, 2017
Venue: Szeged and Budapest, Hungary

Workshop Objectives

The world is rapidly changing, and various disasters and crises take place one after another. Resilience is needed after the crises and disasters. How can we cope with these difficult tasks? In order to think together on these questions globally, regionally, and locally, the International Workshop will be held to encourage junior scholars exploring and debating on their research topics from wider perspectives, involving internationally renowned senior scholars from the School for Slavonic and East European Studies at University College of London, University of Szeged in Hungary and other East European academic institutions and universities in Japan.

Each junior participant is required to prepare a discussion paper for the workshop in advance. Then, at the workshop individual evaluation and suggestions will be given by specialists among the senior participants.

The organizing committee may classify the topics in the workshop as follows, though these topics are not exclusive.

1. Changing and constant elements of governance and economy
2. Relationship between state and civil society
3. Intellectual and spiritual dimensions of the changing life
4. Global and regional relations and migration

The program of the workshop will be:

- 10 September: Arrival in Szeged
- 11 September: Sessions at the regional center of the Hungarian Academy of Sciences
- 12 September: Sessions at the regional center of the Hungarian Academy of Sciences
- 13 September: Cultural expedition in the local environment
- 14 September: Move to Budapest for a half-day workshop at the Cold War History Research Center at Corvinus University of Budapest/Center for Social Sciences, Hungarian Academy of Sciences

The workshop is a free venue for intensive and trans-disciplinary dialogue between the junior and senior participants. Discussions will take place all day and through this intensive workshop attendees are anticipated to greatly improve their research skills, and create a global human network.

The organizing committee calls on ambitious PhD students and Post Doc scholars to participate in the workshop.
